Originally from the canton Neuchâtel, Magali Baer started her studies in humanities and graduated in 2009 with a Bachelor degree in French, linguistics and history. She then decided to change her training path and started to study law. In 2012 she obtained a Bachelor degree with distinction magna cum laude and in 2015 a Master degree with distinction summa cum laude, both from the University of Neuchâtel.

During her studies, Magali Baer worked as a research assistant at the University of Neuchâtel in the project of updating part of the Bernese commentary to the Code of Obligations. She further studied during six months at Columbia Law School, New York.

She started her legal career as trainee lawyer with Hartmann Dreyer and, after passing the Bar examination in 2017, joined Hartmann Dreyer as associate, working closely with Denis Schroeter.
